Men, coupled with the reality that we exist in a patriarchal society, have far too long led science by themselves. No matter what science dictates, more and more people have added alternative approaches to their lifestyle - and for the better, I feel. The medical field can perform tasks short of miracles, but so can alternative approaches when all else fails. But still for others, alternative approaches are still considered "old wives tales. " And oftentimes, proponents of scientific medicine refuse to see the proven results of alternative therapies, no matter how many times they see it. Heres a quick science lesson the most important ingredient of modern nail polish is a substance called nitrocellulose. This clever little ingredient is what forms the film over the top of the nails,
